Things to know about the Worldshop Airport Stores

- 1 Minor repairs to your premium luggage from the Travel Collections can be carried out immediately in our Airport Stores.
- 2 For a wide range of items, we offer an Airport Delivery Service at Frankfurt and Munich Airports. Simply shop online and collect from the Airport Stores.
- 3 You can earn a mile for every Euro or Swiss Franc you spend with us.

You'll find our Airport Stores in Berlin, Dusseldorf, Hamburg and Vienna as well as three branches in Munich and three in Frankfurt, including a branch in the First Class terminal.

Exact locations and opening hours can be found at worldshop.eu/stores

See you at the airport!

Visit us in our Airport Stores and discover a diverse range, top brands at your fingertips, personal advice and new discounts and mileage promotions every month.

For us,
responsibility means never standing still!

Whether we are expanding our range or further developing our own products, taking responsibility means constantly keeping the ball rolling and re-questioning old habits on a regular basis. For example, last year we produced the Lufthansa Life Collection Limited Edition*, which included our first trolleys made from recycled materials.

You can find out more about exactly what we are already doing and what we are working on at the moment at worldshop.eu/more-sustainable

From the way we produce our catalogues to the shipping methods and packaging management in our warehouses, we never stop seeking ways to do better at minimising our environmental footprint and protecting the climate.

Our symbol for a more conscientious choice

Sometimes the little things really can add up to make a difference. That's why we highlight products made in a way that saves resources and minimises the impact on the environment. Products that are more sustainable than comparable offers. So that you can identify these products easily, we have marked them with a leaf symbol. Last year we were able to mark our first own-brand trolleys made from recycled materials* with this symbol.

-  This symbol is used to identify products that meet at least one of the following criteria**:
1. They are made from a minimum of 60% bio-plastics, which are produced from recycled cooking oil from the industrial and catering sectors
  2. They are certified according to one of the following labels: FSC, PEFC, OEKO-TEX®, amfori BSCI, Fairtrade, NATRUE, BDIH, Ecocert, Blauer Engel, Leather Working Group, Global Organic Textile Standard
  3. They are made from at least 60% recycled or upcycled materials, such as old PET bottles
  4. It is a cosmetic product free from silicones and microplastic or with one of the following seals: BDIH, NATRUE, Ecocert, organic seal
  5. They are food items, wines or spirits with one of the following seals: Fairtrade, organic as per the EU Organic Regulation, or Demeter

* Lufthansa Life Collection Limited Edition trolley: outer material up to 75% recycled polycarbonate, inner material up to 100% recycled polyester
** Full details about the materials and ingredients as well as links to more information about the certifying institutions can be found in the product descriptions at worldshop.eu

Treat yourself to an upgrade

Business Class within touching distance

With an Upgrade Award you can turn your trip into something really special. For example, with just 35,000 miles, you can upgrade your flight from Frankfurt to Los Angeles from Economy to Business Class. Stretch out and enjoy the extra space, first-class service and an atmosphere that will transform your trip into a delightfully relaxing experience. Discover the difference with an Upgrade Award.

Your heart's desires are just a few miles away

Life is full of possibilities. Use the miles you collect with Miles & More for everything from little treats to big experiences, your ultimate dream holiday, or that special something you've always wanted.

Your dream holiday with Miles & More

Redeem your miles with our Miles & More airline partners for an exciting Award Flight. Or use them for hotels and car rental and upgrade to a premium holiday! For example, with Eurowings you can kick off your holiday with as few as 9,000 miles.

Treat yourself in the Worldshop

We all know that feeling: the latest smartphone, those incredibly cool headphones, that gadget that's been on your must-have list for a good while, but you can't quite justify the expense... With the Worldshop, you can! Simply by redeeming your miles. Either to cover the whole cost or by using Cash & Miles with a partial payment in Euro or Swiss Francs.

Everyday life can be so rewarding

Collecting miles is much easier than you might think – and it's not just for frequent fliers!

Still not a Miles & More member?

Sign up right now and every day you'll get a little closer to the reward you want. To register, go to miles-and-more.com/enrolment

The first time you log in on our free app, we'll give you 500 miles, just like that!

Extra miles from promotions

Promotions on flights, hotels, car rentals, a wide range of activities and in many participating airport stores, can often instantly add lots of extra miles to your account.

For flights with our airline partners in the last six months, you can even credit your miles and points retroactively to your account.

Points mean miles

You can also convert Shell ClubSmart points or PAYBACK ®points into miles!

The easy way to turbocharge your mileage account is with the Miles & More Credit Card, available to participating members in more than 20 countries. Simply collect miles with your everyday card transactions and enjoy lots of other advantages too.

Miles & More online shopping

500 online shops selling every type of product regularly offer deals that give you up to 50 times the miles.

Collect miles worldwide from our partners in the categories airlines, airports, hotels, entertainment, finance and much more.

Still need to earn some miles to get the reward you want?

No problem. Cash & Miles is the flexible way to redeem your miles. Simply top up your missing miles with the corresponding cash amount and start enjoying inspiring journeys, once-in-a-lifetime experiences and all the exciting things that have long been on your wish list!

Tips for cycling fans

Keep on track

There are loads of great navigation apps out there for cycle touring. Make sure you use up-to-date maps that don't need an internet connection and offer advanced route-planning functionality. It makes life a lot easier if you can download the maps onto your smartphone.

Be flexible

Plan and prepare for your trip carefully, but make sure to leave some flexibility for last-minute alterations. It's not just the weather that can suddenly change. There will be days when your energy levels are low and that's when it's best to make an unscheduled stop.

What about your kit?

Don't carry more than 15 kg on your bike. As an absolute minimum, make sure you pack a basic toolkit, bike lock and helmet, and don't forget the sunscreen. Wear functional sports gear made from breathable fabrics and pack a high-vis, water-proof jacket.

Get out in the sun –
and into the fun

The summer months are the best time to get active and boost your wellbeing in the great outdoors. We have a whole host of suggestions for ways to do just that! And at worldshop.eu/biketour you'll find Europe's best cycle touring routes and all the gear you'll need. What are you waiting for? On your bike!

Upcycling Collections

From high in the sky to eye-catching homeware

Unique, stylish and full of aviation charm: our Upcycling Collections repurpose old materials from aircraft and airports, and turn them into exclusive designer pieces. Perfect for anyone who loves things that are a little out of the ordinary.

With their unique collections, Lufthansa, Austrian and SWISS bring the fascination of flying right into your home – elegant, functional and full of character.

It takes eight to ten weeks to dismantle a decommissioned aircraft – and more than 90 per cent of it is recycled. Working exclusively with European producers, we turn these salvaged materials into something new. We use aircraft skin, windows and wings as well as overhead bins, safety cards, Business Class blankets and even uniforms to create unique designer goods: everything from shelves and coat racks to travel bags and passport covers.

Available exclusively in the Worldshop Airport Stores and at worldshop.eu/upcycling

Springtime just got a whole lot tastier

Chill while you grill: on an evening, there's nothing better than a relaxing barbecue with friends or family. Here, you'll find everything you need to know to enjoy the ultimate summer barbecue.

Charcoal or briquettes?

Traditional charcoal is easier to light than briquettes. It takes 25 minutes to get glowing nicely and generally heats up more quickly too – ideal for sausages and steaks. However, if you're planning to use the barbecue for a big session, briquettes are a better bet. You'll need to leave them to get going for at least 50 minutes, but once hot, they will last for up to three hours.

Direct or indirect grilling?

Direct grilling means placing the food directly over the glowing coals, on a grate or a rack for example, where the temperature is hottest. It's ideal for smaller items of meat. Indirect grilling involves positioning the food as far above the heat on the grate as possible, with the lid closed. This cooks the meat more gently – ideal for larger items of meat and poultry.

All the rage: BBQ smokers

These slow roast the meat in hot smoke – at a low temperature between 90 and 130 °C. The meat retains its moist and juicy consistency and the smoke infuses it with an aromatic flavour.

Gas barbecue – quick and easy

You can use this to cook meat, fish, veg and even cheese at lower temperatures. The external gas flame is designed to burn at a constant 100 to 130 °C and the lid must be kept closed to ensure the heat circulates evenly. Ideal for pulled pork, spare ribs and salmon.

What's the ideal barbecuing temperature?

Steak: 230 to 280 °C

Poultry: 140 to 200 °C

Game: 130 to 180 °C

Fish: 160 to 180 °C

Vegetables: 150 to 180 °C

Soya steaks: 160 to 200 °C

Delicious dining al fresco

How do you like yours? Juicy? Or crispy? Or perhaps hot and spicy? Why not healthy and nutritious? Here, you'll find our top BBQ tips for tasty treats in the summer sunshine – and there's plenty more in store at worldshop.eu/barbecue. You'll also love the other ideas from our extensive home and garden range.

Coordinates A Serious Case of Travelling

The journey continues: Join “Coordinates. A Serious Case of Travelling” and the Lufthansa Aluminium Collection to explore fascinating places around the world. In our blog, you’ll discover intriguing travel reports, spectacular photographs and compelling podcasts. This time, we go to Namibia with Oliver Braun, a bush pilot who knows quite a few flight manoeuvres and even more exciting stories ...

Oscar Lima India: an airman named Oli

A man, a flying machine and a manoeuvre you won't read about in any book. One day, Oliver Braun packed up his things in Germany and started a new life. The print salesman from Bad Homburg became an African bush pilot who flies safari tourists across the oldest desert regions in the world. Meet airman Oli.

The dawn rises over Windhoek Valley. Oliver Braun, 59, awakens early. At 6.30 am, he drives through the gates of the small airport, stops right beside his Cessna, which is parked in the grass. White wings, gleaming cockpit, large propeller.

Braun has been flying small aircraft over southern Africa for 24 years. He acquired this model – a 1976 Cessna 210 – some 15 years ago. Its call sign, Oscar Lima India, is painted in large letters on white paint, mimicking the airman's nickname: Oli.

Braun goes through the checklists. Today, he will be flying two customers into the vast Namib Desert, a land of sun and sand and scorpions scurrying for cover.

He starts the engine at 8 am. After a short radio exchange with the tower, he receives clearance to take off. The former printer applies thrust, and the Cessna races down the runway, lifts off and climbs easily into the blue sky. Windhoek quickly grows smaller, the houses, the parks, while in front of the cockpit, the 2,000-meter peaks move steadily closer. The Khomas Highland and Otjihavera Mountains surround the city like a cauldron.

Braun banks, turning the Cessna south-west. And then it's not long before the promise of ultimate freedom unfolds: unspoilt Africa in all its glory.

Bare earth, wherever you look.
 Reddish-brown slopes, desiccated salt flats, hollows criss-crossed with crazy patterns –
 the preserve of desert elephants, sand lizards and snakes.

Namibia is called the “Land of Open Spaces”. You don’t have to fly very far to understand why. Just beyond the Gamsberg, the Hakos Mountains begin, a brown, austere world of stony plateaus and beige-coloured scree. Scattered settlements are visible, streets running in thin lines towards the horizon. Soon, the Naukluft Mountains appear; further to the south-east, the Tsondab, a dry riverbed, bisecting the ochre-coloured plain like a long scar.

Up in the sky, a thermal tugs at the Cessna and shakes the aircraft briefly about. Braun is unperturbed. He knows the routes across the desert by heart, the watering holes, the distinctive landmarks by which he navigates. It almost seems as if he’s familiar with every air pocket, too.

After a 20-minute flight, we approach the Great Escarpment, the gateway to the central Namib Desert, the threshold to no man’s land. The sheer immensity is breathtaking. Bare earth, wherever you look. Reddish-brown slopes, desiccated salt flats, hollows criss-crossed with crazy patterns – the preserve of desert elephants, sand lizards and snakes.

It's precisely this landscape that drew the German printer to Namibia. Plenty of nature, very few people, a dry climate, abundant wildlife. Braun stretches his arm across the instrument panel and passes his hand over the vast wilderness beneath him. He looks at me briefly from behind dark pilot's glasses. "You understand what I mean?"

Namibia is the second most scarcely populated country in the world. Only Mongolia has fewer people and even more untamed space. The land beneath the aircraft's wings stretches from Angola to South Africa, an area two and a half times the size of Germany but home to only 2.5 million people. Such immensity, such proportions create a singular sense of space and time as the tiny Cessna flies over a planet absolutely untouched by human hand.

There's not a cloud in the sky as Braun throttles the engine and prepares for his descent an hour later. From an altitude of over 8,000 feet, the Cessna heads towards a chain of mountains rising from the plain like delicate cones. "The landing strip is beyond them", says Braun. "We'll be on the ground in five minutes."

There's no tower in sight, no terminal building. The airfield in the sweltering hollow below consists of a few sheds and a narrow landing strip. There's nothing else but the wind sighing through a rusty gate and three antelopes trotting westward.

The pilot banks another turn, the runway is now visible. Braun lands soft as butter, taxis briefly and comes to a stop. The Cessna is silent. A gust of hot air blows in from the desert. The sun is directly overhead. Braun says: "Welcome to the Namib."

How the printer from Germany became a bush pilot in the Namibian wilderness is a story in itself. Oliver Braun didn't just have to learn to fly, he had to fly a steep turn in life.

Such immensity, such proportions create a singular sense of space and time as the tiny Cessna flies over a planet absolutely untouched by human hand.

From German print specialist to African bush pilot – not a routine manoeuvre.

At the camp in the evening, he sits in the sand in front of the fire pit outside his tent. “See the oryx antelopes up there?” he asks. “They’re far too thin, you can count their ribs. They know that without rain or food, they’ll soon be facing hard times, so they’re moving slowly.”

Once an expert on typography and embossing techniques, Oliver Braun knows lots of other things now. Over time, he not only became a bush pilot but also a flying expert in Namibia. He tells the story of how his life took a new turn. A routine manoeuvre it was not.

Braun was 30, and the family printing business was going exceptionally well. But then the computer age dreamt up something new called desktop publishing. This meant that documents containing text and images of any kind could be electronically typeset and distributed from any office, private home or anywhere else within just seconds. It was an incredible invention for some. And a devilish misfortune for others. Thousands of printers worldwide went out of business. They lost accounts, were forced to downsize and eventually disappeared from the market.

Druckerei Braun, the family firm, was also affected at the time. Braun had to rethink his life. Had to reinvent it. The idea to become a pilot came to him while on holiday in Namibia. The fundamental question he struggled with was this: What do I want from life? Is now the time to start something completely new? He entertained the thought: Him? A pilot? In Africa?

Departures, landings, navigation, night flights, checklists, protocol.

What a bold, crazy idea! But then things started falling into place. Finally, Braun screwed up his courage and followed his heart – the heart of an airman. In May 2000, he put away his briefcase, sold everything he owned in Germany and flew to South Africa. He started his pilot training the next day.

He completed a crash course. Earned his PPL, his private pilot licence, then his CPL, his commercial pilot licence, racking up flight hours in the sky. Departures, landings, navigation, night flights, checklists, protocol.

And he performed banked turns. Soon afterwards, he achieved his goal. Braun was a pilot. In an old, used VW Golf, he drove 3,000 kilometres across southern Africa to Namibia, where he knew that pilots were very much in demand.

The rest is history. His story. He applied for a job and began flying over Africa. Every day, every week, every month. He flew into the Kalahari and landed at remote lodges. Took customers to Angola, to Botswana. One day he purchased his own plane. Oscar Lima India. After 24 years in Africa, with 5,800 flight hours under his belt, Braun says: “I know I made the right decision. I built a new life for myself. And after all: I really love to fly.”

Braun also knows that no little invention will ever take this job away.

Computers don't have wings.

Spread out below us
in the balmy light, the drifts resemble a sculptured relief
created by the wind.

The early light of dawn finds him standing beside his aircraft the next morning. At 7 am, as the sun creeps over the horizon, the Cessna takes off, heading west towards St Francis Bay and Black Rock on the coast. Then on to Sossusvlei, the world's oldest sea of dunes, which comes into view like a wall of peaked waves, towering ridges and pyramids of orange sand. Some of the most famous formations have names, like Dune 45 or Big Daddy.

Within a minute, a unique world opens up beneath the plane, a labyrinth of lee and sickle dunes, blown into sandy arches, crescents and parabolas. Spread out below us in the balmy light, the drifts resemble a sculptured relief created by the wind.

Braun banks the plane. Up here in the sky, you want to reach out and stroke the dunes, lose yourself in their beauty. The eye surfs the waves of sand, exploring the soft, unending lines and shapes that it has never seen before.

Braun has seen it all before, of course, but it amazes him again and again. "That's the wonderful thing about flying in Africa", he says. "The landscape is staggering. You fly over this wide, empty land, leaving you speechless every time."

And, best thing of all: very few aircraft fly above the desert here. So, when you want to bank a turn, you do.

Coordinates

Ever onward towards the horizon

From the hot sands of Africa to the cold Arctic Ocean, from an idyllic Italian island to the depths of the universe: the travel blog “Coordinates. A Serious Case of Travelling” whisks you away to exciting places and intriguing worlds. Each carefully selected set of coordinates is a fabulous destination where passionate individuals tell remarkable stories. In Rio, we set out to discover the roots of bossa nova, in Kerala we encounter “Queen Coconut”, a tropical fruit icon. In Svalbard we learn how the Arctic is changing and in Zermatt, we meet scientists who study exoplanets and distant galaxies.

This and a lot more awaits you at Coordinates. Captivating images, intriguing stories, poignant podcasts. But best of all – plenty of inspiration and countless reasons to set off and discover the world for yourself. And always at your side, a trusty companion that stops at nothing, loves adventure and was made for travelling. This is the spirit behind the development of the Lufthansa Aluminium Collection. A case that’s always packed and ready to go – filled with anticipation and a yearning to cast off your moorings and depart.

Adventure for the heart and ears

The Coordinates podcast is a full-length travel report. Gripping and informative, it takes you right to the centre of the action.

Switzerland: gaining insights into the universe

Lufthansa Aluminium Collection First Class Edition

The design of this special edition draws inspiration from the colour scheme associated with Lufthansa Allegris First Class, which has been providing passengers with a unique long-haul travel experience since 2024. The high-quality aluminium shell is a warm and contemporary shade of bronze while the lining is dark blue with a subtle “Wing Pattern” print. The well-designed internal partitioning is complemented by a packing cube and a set consisting of a shoe bag and a laundry bag in the special edition dark blue shade. Simply First Class, down to the tiniest detail.

The Bridge

For fifty years, The Bridge has been uniting tradition and modernity, nostalgia and joie de vivre, vintage and a green soul. The result? Bags and accessories with natural, timeless elegance that reflect the Tuscan way of life. While fashions come and go, The Bridge's elegance remains. Classic, unmistakeable, worldly wise – and always inseparably bound to an environmentally conscious Slow Life approach. Each individual piece in the collection is made unique by artisan manufacturing rooted in the traditions of Florence and Tuscany.

travelite Crosslite

The Crosslite series is made from tightly woven recycled polyester for robustness and durability. If you need even more space, the expansion pleat provides additional volume. The Crosslite models feature a TSA combination lock with large numbers and Braille. This security technology enables customs officials in over 40 countries to open your suitcase without damaging it in the event of any security concerns. Other clever added touches, such as packing straps, a separate shirt compartment, a removable packing bag and a laundry bag, combine to create perfectly designed internal compartments.

travelite Roomer

The trolleys in the Roomer series have a spacious interior that has been designed with a ratio of one third to two thirds, making it particularly easy to pack your suitcase in a well-organised way. The lining is made from 100% recycled polyester. Despite their size, all the trolleys are incredibly lightweight – leaving more of your allocated weight allowance for all the things you need on your travels. Thanks to the double wheels, the trolleys can be pushed and manoeuvred effortlessly, including when turning a full 360 degrees. What’s more, the anti-tilt wheelbase gives the heels optimal stability.

Love at first click

Establish your focus point
Finding a focus point is a must. But remember: it doesn't always have to be in the middle. Imagine there's a tic-tac-toe grid over the image. This will help you determine side focus points that get your pics noticed.

Use leading lines
These are lines in your shot that help guide the viewer's gaze towards the focal point. Leading lines can be any linear feature in your photo: streets, fences, buildings, corridors, trees or shadows.

Add depth of field
You can add depth by incorporating both foreground and background elements. Instead of snapping a person standing against a wall, try placing them closer to the camera or using a more distant background.
